Submissions of projects for this 11th edition of the Dedalo Minosse Prize were received from over 40 different countries from around the world. Based on a consolidated formula, the prize concerns projects that have already been realised, for which the collaboration between the architect and the client plays a crucial role. These works range from large to small scale designs, benchmark examples of social sustainability, use of innovative and recyclable technologies and materials to conserve the environment (built and natural), promotion of local traditions, integration between art, architecture and design, multidisciplinary design approaches, public sharing and application of the so-called Design for All concept.

The four main awards are reserved for clients who have commissioned a freelance architect and are differentiated according to the architect's place of origin (international or Italian) and to their age, with a special prize for young Architects under 40 also awarded. Here are this year's winners of the main prizes:

The Dedalo Minosse International Prize was awarded to the Mount Herzl National Memorial in Jerusalem, designed by Kimmel Eshkolot Architects and commissioned by the Department of Families and Commemoration of the Israeli Ministry of Defence. A project with a very strong symbolic value, commemorating the names of the many soldiers who have died in the various wars in which Israel has been involved since the 19th century. The key idea behind the project was to associate the name of a single fallen soldier to each headstone, with the possibility of continuing to add them in the future. Architect Etan Kimmel described the design process as a spiral movement, where you go back to the same point but at a higher level, a symbol of the awareness gained along the way.
